

Dennis Hadrick, Program Manager for Conventional Weapons Destruction Projects at U.S. Department of State, wins Officer of the Year Award

The Office of Weapons Removal and Abatement is proud to announce that Dennis Hadrick, Program Manager for Estonia, Iraq, Jordan, Lebanon and Yemen (currently), has won the Officer of the Year Award for the Bureau of Political-Military Affairs in the U.S. Department of State. Each year, one outstanding individual chosen for this award. Dennis was selected because of his consistent superior performance and important contributions in promoting humanitarian mine action and conventional-weapons destruction efforts around the world, particularly in countries just emerging from conflict, such as Georgia and Iraq.

is

Dennis has over 28 years of service to the federal government, including more than a decade of service in PM/WRA and its predecessor office, creating and managing conventional-weapons destruction programs around the world. We are proud of his accomplishments and his continued creativity and service in carrying out our mission.

Secretary of State Clinton delivered remarks and presented the award to Dennis on October 19.